Sewer work goes ahead

R. L. Thibido, contractor for the Atascadero sewer project, was given the green light Friday to continue with the compaction method he has been using for refilling the sewer trenches.

"We have been very pleased with the test results of the past five days," Richard A. Drahn, county hydraulic engineer, told Thibido during a special meeting in Atascadero.

Thibido's water settlement system of compacting the earth after it had been placed in the trenches had been proving unsatisfactory. A meeting last week gave Thibido just a few days to prove that he could do better.

Physician in court on dump charge

Dr. Ervin A. Wical, Arroyo Grande physician, pleaded nolo contendere in Grover City Justice court Friday on charges of dumping waste material from his clinic into the Los Berros Creek bed.

Nolo contendere has the same legal effect as a guilty plea, but it does not bar him from denying the truth of charges in any other proceedings he might be subjected to.

Dr. Wical's brother-in-law, Warren Smith, pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charges.

A formal complaint was issued against Dr. Wical and Smith on Sept. 18 by the district attorney's office. The charges were unauthorized dumping on private property and unauthorized dumping within 50 feet of a high water mark.

The pair was accused of dumping bags of hypodermic needles, syringes and other material at a site four miles northeast of Highway 101 in Los Berros Canyon on the Campodemo Ranch owned by George Dana and Andrew Renczkay.

The material was discovered by a neighboring rancher and traced to Dr. Wical's office because it had his name on several of the waste bags that were discarded.

Judge G. S. Dana returned the matter to the probation department which must report back to the court by Oct. 26, the date set for sentencing.

The offense is punishable by a maximum of six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Fire hazard at Anderson Hotel

By Jack Magee Staff Writer

Virtual closure of the Anderson Hotel until fire safety hazards are corrected is being sought by city officials.

The five-story, quarter-block structure on the southeast corner of Monterey and Morro streets in the heart of San Luis Obispo is the city's tallest building and has been a landmark since the early 1920s.

Its more than 200 rooms are fully occupied by permanent residents with only three reserved for transient guests. William Hagerty, who acquired the hotel several years ago, lives in a penthouse atop the hotel.

The City Council will be asked at its Monday night meeting to authorize legal action to declare the hotel a public nuisance and require the owners and operators to show why it should not be vacated above the first floor pending elimination of the hazards.

The complaint, to be filed in Superior Court, would also ask suspension of the hotel's restaurant operation until hazards in that part of the building are rectified.

Chief building inspector John

Kellerman and Fire Marshal Don Kaye made the request in a letter to the council, accompanied by other documents and a memorandum from Fire Chief Lee Schlobohm.

"It is my opinion, concurred (n) by the fire marshal, that the fire-like hazard conditions within the Anderson Hotel building at this time are an intolerable situation causing the most severe threat possible to the many occupants of this building," Schlobohm wrote.

respectfully request your support in an attempt to avert this potential major disaster," the chief added.

Schlobohm's memo detailed department inspections and contacts with Hagerty dating back to early 1969 and said that none of the most serious hazards among 49 originally listed had been corrected, despite repeated notices and time extensions.

The fire safety requirements ordered include one-hour fire-resistant interior stairway walls and doors, lighted exit signs, permanently closed transoms, automatic sprinkler in the basement, self-closing elevator doors and sealing of the laundry chute between the first floor and the basement.

Chief Schlobohm said the Anderson was the first hotel to be inspected closely under a new effort taking in buildings three or more stories high because it is the largest and tallest. Two other hotels fall in the category. Both are three stories high.

Accompanying the letters of Schlobohm, Kellerman, Kaye and planning director Ron Young—including copies of letters to Hagerty and others—were copies of articles dealing with tragic hotel and other building fires of recent years.

Football team's plane crashes; 29 killed

SILVER PLUME, Colo. (UPI) — Twenty-nine persons, most of them Wichita State University football players and officials on their way to a game with Utah State, were killed Friday when their chartered plane crashed and exploded high in the Colorado Rockies.

The crash of the twin-engine Martin 40-1 were taken 62 miles by ambulance to Lutheran Hospital and St. Anthony Hospital in Denver. Tom Reeves, 31, a trainer for the team, was listed in critical condition today and four others were reported in serious condition.

The dead included Head Coach Ben Wilson and his wife, Wichita State Athletic Director A.C. "Bert" Katsenmeyer and his wife, 11 players, pilot Dan Crocker, two stewardesses and Kansas State Legislator Ray King.

The rest of the team's coaches and players were on another plane which landed safely at Logan, Utah, about an hour after the crash. They attended informal church services Friday night.

Wichita State President Dr. Clark Ahlberg said it was "a sad, tragic day in the history of the university."

"These kids genuinely loved each other," Defensive Coach Fred Coni said. "We are a young team, and these boys have been playing well together. We thought we were really building something."

Witnesses said the plane, backing and trailing black, billowing smoke from both its engines, apparently tried to make an emergency landing on a highway on the east side of Loveland Pass but "zoomed up" to avoid hitting a car.

It went down in heavy timber 11,000 high in the Rockies, exploding on impact and starting a small forest fire on the snowy, pine-covered mountain side.

Coach Kettel, the starting right linebacker for the Wichita State Shockers, survived the crash. He said he was chatting with four teammates at the rear of the plane when he realized something was wrong.

"The plane took a sharp bank to the left and then another sharp bank to the right and then it hit," the 26-year-old Chicago boy said.

"The impact ripped the side of the plane wide open and then I heard an explosion."

Then blood was running from a severe gash on his forehead. He was too stunned to fully grasp what was happening.

"I saw the hole and heard people telling me to get up. There was dirt and smoke all around. It seemed like the whole side and bottom of the plane had ripped off. We could hear quite a few screams inside. A couple of guys went back to the plane to try to get some of the other players out, but they couldn't do it."

Mr. and Mrs. George Grunwald of Huntington Beach, Calif., were driving down the east side of Loveland Pass when "the plane tried to land in the highway in front of us."

"By the grace of God he zoomed up so he didn't hit us," Mrs. Grunwald said. "I'm tell you, if we hadn't been on that highway, he would have tried to land. I couldn't see the wreck—just a big ball of fire."

Another witness, Pat Buckley, 34, had just finished putting gas in the tank of a state patrol car at Silver Plume when he noticed the aircraft in trouble.

"One engine was backfiring real bad," he said. "Both engines were trailing black smoke."

Buckley jumped in his car and tried to catch up with the state patrolman.

"I saw a big puff of black smoke in the trees as I was driving up," he said.

Rescuers found battered black and gold football helmets scattered along the ground, along with smoldering shirts and ties, shoulder pads, a charred book of football plays and a pair of deated shoes with No. 85 marked inside.

The injured were taken to Idaho Springs for emergency treatment by a country doctor, Dr. Morton Durham.

"All we did here was try to stave off severe shock," Durham said. "We had a lot of people helping here, but there was only so much we could do."

Relatives of the survivors were flown to Colorado by Kansas Air National Guard planes late Friday evening, and then went by automobile to the hospitals.

Buckeye firefighters optimistic

Firefighters today were optimistic they had been able to contain the 44,000-acre Buckeye brush fire in Monterey and northern San Luis Obispo counties.

The rush of the fire has slowed, say U.S. Forest Service and California Division of Forestry officials, and only 500 acres of previously undamaged land were burned over yesterday. Officials estimate that the fire was 95 per cent contained this morning.

A portion of the fire at the southeast corner—on the slopes of Burro Mountain, between Hunter-Liggett Military Reservation and Los Padres National Forest—remained uncontained until 10:45 a.m. today.

Because of the extreme fire danger in the national forest, Los Padres and eight other forests in central and southern California were ordered closed to public use Friday by Regional Forester Douglas Leisz in San Francisco.

The areas will remain closed so long as the extreme fire hazard continues, Leisz said.

Forest Service officials estimate the Buckeye fire has cost the agency $500,000 in fire suppression costs, and they estimate the CDF and military agencies have probably also spent that much. Fire damage to watershed, timber and wildlife is estimated at $4 million.

The fire began Sunday near Salmon Creek, about a mile north of the San Luis Obispo County line. It has burned north from there for eight miles along Highway 1. Inland the fire is larger; it has burned six miles inland and burned 12 miles along a north-south line, and extends south into this county.

The fire has burned over lands in the national forest, in the military reservation, and over private lands under the firefighting jurisdiction of the CDF.

City Council
Five proposals for Nuss pool

Five alternative proposals from San Luis Coastal School District trustees for future operation of Nuss Pool will be considered by the San Luis Obispo City Council Monday night.

The need for rehabilitation of the pool costing more than $100,000 prompted the proposals.

Supt. Ronald E. Noltey outlined them in a letter to the council as follows:

Dissolve the existing joint powers agreement between the city, the county and the district and let the district take over.

City and county assist in rehabilitation of the pool or construction of a new one.

The city take over on a lease for a nominal fee with the district contracting for school program swimming on a cost-rental basis.

Keep the original agreement but have the city pay a pro-rated share of operational and maintenance costs for the three summer months during which the pool would be open free to all city residents afternoons and evenings. Estimated annual cost to the city: $5,000.

Keep the original agreement but let the district expand its summer swimming instruction spaces which would otherwise be available for customer parking, but the flagrant disregard for the city's parking regulations sets a bad example for visitors and regular customers who use the available public parking while shopping in downtown shops."

He didn't explain how tattling proprietors could be always certain of singling out only the cars of employers or employees and not risking offense to customers and tourists by tagging theirs.

Davidson wrote that "Not only do these individuals occupy program into the afternoons while the city moves on a definite timetable to build and run its own pool at Sinsheimer Recreation Park."

Noltey said the trustees prefer a limited partnership agreement of some type.

The pool cost $109,770 to build, with the county contributing $5,000, the city $30,000, district $15,000 and the property and maintenance. Public subscription raised $3,770.

"The Board of Education has extended itself in fulfilling its share of the existing joint powers agreement," Noltey said.

"We have provided all maintenance of Nuss Pool at a cost of over $900 a month ($11,000 annually); provided summer recreational personnel at an annual net cost of $1,000 (after deducting paid admission); and provided an attractive parking and picnic area servicing the pool at a cost of $48,200."

Noltey said the district has spent about $241,000 besides providing the site on its grounds by the junior and senior high schools.

"We also realize that Nuss Pool has been very beneficial to the school district instruction program and agree that we use it 40 per cent of its total potential availability."

New stamps to fight pollution

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Postmaster General Winton M. Blount said Friday that four new six-cent stamps, printed on the same sheet, will be issued at San Clemente, Calif., Oct. 28 to focus attention on efforts to combat pollution. Each stamp carries an exhortation: "Save our Soil," "Save our Cities," "Save our Water," and "Save our Air."
